I. Introduction

1. The present report is the twenty-third consolidated report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms issued by the Secretary-General since the establishment of the Register.[1] The General Assembly, in paragraphs 3, 4, 5 and 6 (a) of resolution 68/43, called upon Member States to provide their data and information on international transfers of major conventional arms covered by the Register, including "nil" reports and additional background information, on an annual basis.

2. On 24 February 2015, the Secretariat sent a note verbale to Member States requesting them to submit their reports no later than 29 May 2015. Reminders were sent on 9 June. The replies received are reproduced in sections II to IV and in the annex below. Any further national reports and additional information received from Governments will be issued as addenda to the present report.

3. The Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat has continued to maintain and operate the Register of Conventional Arms, including its database and online reporting tool. The percentage of Member States using the online reporting tool in filing their national reports with the Register has been on the rise since its introduction in 2012. The Office has also continued its efforts to raise awareness of the Register among Member States and promote their participation in it, including by periodically sending reminders to Member States and organizing a briefing of delegates on the margins of the First Committee of the General Assembly in October 2014.

4. The originals of the replies from Member States are available to Governments from the Office for Disarmament Affairs.[2] The annual reports and other relevant information on the Register are available on the website of the Register.[3]

With reference to resolution 68/43 entitled "Transparency in armaments", in particular paragraph 6 (a), Germany would like to make the following comments:

The United Nations Register of Conventional Arms has proved to be one of the few important global transparency and confidence-building measures. Germany strongly supports this instrument and has regularly made comprehensive reports to the Secretary-General. Even after the entry into force of the Arms Trade Treaty, as long as this treaty is not universal in adherence, the Register will serve as a reference and retain its usefulness. As proposed in the Treaty, potential synergies in reporting for States that are party to both mechanisms could be explored.

Germany has also encouraged States to provide comprehensive reports, including on small arms and light weapons. Germany believes that the inclusion of small arms and light weapons as a mandatory reporting category of the Register would substantively enhance the usefulness of this instrument. In many parts of the world, small arms and light weapons are the main factor of instability. In general, it is small arms rather than heavy weaponry that fuel regional as well as internal conflicts.

The groups of governmental experts that convened in accordance with resolutions 57/75, 60/226, 63/69 and 66/39 in 2003, 2006, 2009 and 2013, respectively, all debated the possibility of including small arms and light weapons in the Register. As the Arms Trade Treaty includes in its scope small arms and light weapons, their inclusion in the Register seems even more pertinent.

Germany is concerned about the declining number of reports submitted to the Secretary-General since the beginning of the past decade and proposes to start analysing the reasons for this development. Germany believes that a renewed effort should be made to strengthen the universal use of this instrument of transparency and trust-building, including by submitting "nil" reports. The online reporting mechanism established by the Office for Disarmament Affairs is a very useful tool to that end. In view of the dynamic technological progress and the resulting changes regarding the shape, operation and nature of conventional weapons, Germany regards it as essential to allow for a flexible evolution of the Register. Owing to the recommendations of the respective groups of governmental experts, the Register has undergone further development since its inception. Germany believes, however, that technology has evolved even faster in recent years, allowing for the emergence of new weaponry that is potent enough to have an impact on overall military effectiveness but that is not being properly reflected in the Register. Therefore, Germany believes that it is time for a more fundamental debate on the nature of the categories, in particular with regard to continuous technological progress in the future.

The United Nations Register should be amended to include small arms and light weapons as a separate category of conventional arms. Such an amendment would result in the items in the Register being consistent with the definition and scope of conventional arms under the Arms Trade Treaty. In addition, the information may also prove useful to developing Caribbean States, such as Jamaica, with respect to the development of small arms control policies to mitigate the scourge of illicit trade in conventional arms, primarily firearms and light weapons.

Jamaica's impending status as the world's fourth logistics hub, as well as improvements to the Panama Canal, will result in greater movement of conventional arms, including small and light weapons, throughout the region, which could exacerbate the crime situation if not carefully managed.

The Ministry of National Security of Jamaica seeks clarification as to what exactly constitutes an "arms transfer", as this term is not clearly defined in the relevant resolution.
